

JUDGE'S OPINION

Big and beautiful... a catchphrase that perfectly describes the new Range Rover. I've driven it enough to appreciate its excellent ride quality, superb off-road capability, sumptuous interior and devastating good looks, and therefore knew that even with two newcomers in its class – the VW Touareg and Volvo XC90 – it would wend its way to the top step of the podium with ease. Putting aside the heritage that comes as standard with a Land Rover product, the Range Rover exudes something more, a kind of insouciance that at once declares it knows there's nothing out there to endanger its position as king of the hill. Pure, unadulterated off-road excellence and on-road refinement make it simply the best.
